ATLANTA, GA., JANUARY 10, 1891.

The Constitution in Augusta.

We observe with regret that Editor Patrick Walsh continues to fret and worry himself over the new railway schedule that enables the Augusta readers of THE CONSTITUTION to get their paper at 9:30 o'clock in the morning. He is not incensed; he has not, as you may say, produced his tomahawk; but he seems to be grieved. For some reason or other his feelings have been hurt by this new schedule, and he gives daily evidence of it in the columns of THE Chronicle.

But even his grief is not aimed at THE CONSTITUTION. It is the railroad that has caused the trouble, and not Editor Walsh's esteemed Atlanta contemporary. Nevertheless, we cannot be a disinterested spectator of Editor Walsh's grief, and we feel constrained to assure him that matters are probably not as bad as his alarmed fancy has painted them. Perhaps it may soothe our friend to know that for four years THE MAON Telegraph has been placed in Atlanta at 7 o'clock in the morning. Suppose THE CONSTITUTION had grown as dependent and as disconsolate over this fact as THE CONSTITUTION arrives in Augusta at 9:30 o'clock in the morning. We do not know what the result would have been, but we do know that the matter has not disturbed us in the least, and we are sure nobody else has been disturbed. The Telegraph arrives, but there are very few people that know it, and THE CONSTITUTION goes on just the same as ever. We shudder to think of the consequences on Editor Walsh's tender nerves, should THE CONSTITUTION be delivered in Augusta at 7 o'clock in the morning.

Since the new schedule went into effect THE Chronicle has devoted a leading editorial every day to showing that THE CONSTITUTION that reaches Augusta is not so good a paper now as it was before the fatal change took place, and Editor Walsh is trying to pick flaws in his esteemed contemporary. It is a thankless task indeed, and to an editor so genial and generous it is neither agreeable nor becoming. Yet it is not unkindly done. It is grief (as we have said), and not unfriendliness that guides the gentle hand to its unaccustomed task.

The Chronicle seems to lay great stress on the service of the Associated Press. It is indeed a valuable service, but it is only incidental and supplementary to the news service of THE CONSTITUTION. Moreover, we do not by any means use all the matter that comes to us from the Associated Press. Take, for instance, the silver speech of Senator Daniel, which made three columns in THE Chronicle, and which our esteemed contemporary proudly points to as having been left out of THE CONSTITUTION; it is interesting matter, but it is not news. It was side-tracked to make room for matter of more moment. Instead of this speech, THE CONSTITUTION printed special dispatches from more than 100 counties in the state in which there were interesting election contests. THE Chronicle, we believe, had the news from six counties.

THE CONSTITUTION'S special news service is very important, for it covers a wide field that is of prime interest to its readers. It prints more special news than all its esteemed daily contemporaries in Georgia put together, and has been doing so for years and making no fuss about it. If the esteemed Chronicle will institute a comparison covering the special news service of THE CONSTITUTION, it will discover one of the secrets of the popularity of a great newspaper.

The Associated Press closes in Atlanta and in Augusta at precisely the same hour. The difference which is worrying THE Chronicle is due to the railroads, which have mixed the clocks of the two cities. It closes in Atlanta at 1:30 o'clock a. m., which is 2 o'clock in Augusta, and THE CONSTITUTION is able to embrace the whole of it in its columns if it wants to, but, like all other matter that finds a place in these columns, it is rigidly edited. If it is important it goes in, even if something else has to be left out. If it is not important, it goes into the wastebasket, and THE CONSTITUTION proceeds on its way to Augusta to aid THE Chronicle and the bright evening papers in making the people of that city happier and better.

The edition of THE CONSTITUTION that goes to Augusta is exactly the same that is read in Atlanta and elsewhere, and in not a single instance since the new schedule went into effect have we varied, in any respect, any edition of the paper.

Is Our Climate Changing?

Ever since everybody can remember the earth has been changing its shape through seismic or volcanic action, and the transfer of weight shifts the position of the axis. Observations in Germany showed that in the life of a generation there was a change of about 100 feet in the latitude of a particular place. Though this is insignificant in a short space of time, it becomes interesting when applied to the facts of geology which go to show marked changes of climate.

The science of terrestrial physics is in its infancy, and the next few decades will doubtless bring us to the knowledge of many strange things. It is particularly interesting to observe that scientists attributed the forces that are changing the structure of the earth to conflicting attractions from without. They hold that the world is affected by the attraction of other bodies besides the sun, and that not only the tides, but the crust of the earth and the atmosphere are moved by this attraction. This gives corroboration to the weather theory of Rev. Irl R. Hicks, who seems to have stumbled upon a very profound truth. When we know more about terrestrial magnetism and atmospheric electricity, we will be able to make better weather predictions.

The Blaine Circus.

There seems to be no doubt that Mr. Blaine carried his basket of statesmanship to a poor market when he began his Behring sea controversy with Lord Salisbury. He has been getting himself in a tangle which will be very difficult to untangle, and the great trouble is that the country, and not Mr. Blaine, will lose prestige at the result. Nothing that Mr. Blaine can do—no blunder that he can make—no letter of his that remains unburnt—will cause him to lose prestige with the republican "boys." He is their leader and their idol, and so far as they are concerned, he will be a bigger man than ever when Lord Salisbury turns him down.

There seems to be no doubt that the secretary of state has pushed the claims of the United States too far in his correspondence with Lord Salisbury. He is a caustic letter writer and as full of plausibility as a hurricane is of wind, but these things count for very little in a diplomatic correspondence, and they bring this government out at the little end of the horn. If Mr. Blaine does not bring on a war, which is not impossible, he will undoubtedly subject his country to the mortification of receding from the position he has taken under his auspices.

Secretary Bayard had the whole matter in excellent shape when Mr. Blaine took it up and began to flourish the American flag. Mr. Bayard's policy had for its purpose the perfection of an agreement by which the seals could be protected from poachers during the period of gestation by an international compact. During the period when the seals could be hunted, they would be safely within the jurisdiction of the United States. This arrangement had been about perfected by Mr. Bayard when Mr. Blaine's circus put in an appearance.

Thus the matter stands, with Mr. Blaine claiming the earth and getting nothing.

A Great Scheme.

If Chicago fails in the world's fair business she will have an opportunity to redeem herself in another line. The great western city is nothing if not enterprising, and has recently mapped out what threatens to be the greatest engineering work of the century.

This work will be the opening of a great channel which will connect the chain of lakes and Chicago with the Mississippi, the Gulf, the Atlantic and the Pacific—a navigable highway of such stupendous commercial importance as to arouse the enthusiasm of every American. As THE Chicago Globe puts it: The scheme is outlined in that paper as follows:

The cost of the undertaking to the nation would be as nothing compared with the benefit, and it would be made an ultimate service of large revenue and profits. The project implies many collateral advantages, one of which would be the pouring of an undying volume of water into the Mississippi, to the vast advantage of river navigation for ever coasting troublesome bars and permitting greater draught to freight-laden boats. The originator of this novel idea is Mr. Cooley, a civil engineer, who has printed an extensive report of it, and is now endeavoring to induce state and federal legislation in favor of his plans. What a great thing it would be if Mr. Cooley could furnish his motor in time to render his valuable assistance to the work!

Major Burke in Exile.

Major E. A. Burke, the defaulting state treasurer of Louisiana, appears to be happy and moderately prosperous in his Central American home. From time to time we have seen in print reports to the effect that the major was in hard luck and in bad health. These reports, however, made their appearance at a time when the Louisiana authorities were considering ways and means to kidnap the ex-treasurer, and bring him to justice. Later, when the fugitive felt more confident, he made himself prominent in defending President Bogan during the recent revolt at Tegucigalpa. At last accounts the major was flourishing. He is living like a prince with Bogan, and is said to be the richest man in Honduras. He is the president's right-hand man and adviser, and is virtually the controlling power in the republic.

Whether Burke is living on the fortune he carried with him, or whether he is making money, is not definitely known. He claims that he looks to the future for his profits, and promises, when he has accumulated enough, to return to New Orleans and pay his debt to the state with 5 per cent interest. It is not likely that the Louisianians feel much confidence in this promise. Many years ago a man named Meigs, in San Francisco, became involved, like Burke, in various defalcations. He fled the country, and went to Peru, where he made himself a millionaire. He was famous as a railroad contractor and as a developer. The indictments against him in San Francisco were dismissed, but he would neither return nor square up his indebtedness. He died in South America, and a monument was raised to commemorate his name. Burke will probably be less successful than Meigs, but he will follow his example and remain in perpetual exile. A man of his proud and sensitive nature will never voluntarily return to live among a people whose authority would now send him to the penitentiary if they could capture him. Still, there are few who wish the man any personal harm. If he can, in any way, redeem himself in Honduras, by all means let him go ahead and do it.

Mere Sound and Fury.

We have in this country a few journalists and politicians who are always threatening to twist the tail of the British lion. There is no sense in such talk. The people of the United States are so busy with their money-making enterprises that they have no time for warfare, unless it becomes a defensive necessity. Twisting the British lion's tail is a dangerous pastime, and there is no profit in it.

But there are a few hot-heads in Canada who are as much to blame as the agitators on this side of the line. They boast that they can place a force of 900,000 men in the field, and this army, with the aid of England's navy, they think would be able to seriously cripple the United States. These loud-mouthed talkers forget two things. There is no real cause for a war, and there would be nothing made of it on either side. In fact, as Lord Salisbury puts it, such a conflict would shock the civilized world.

The real interests in Behring sea are comparatively small, and no matter what points of difference may arise there is no good reason why the governments interested should not submit the matter to arbitration. In these enlightened days there is no sense in fighting over a business dispute when a fair adjustment can be secured peaceably.

No doubt England and the United States could materially damage each other, and have a prolonged struggle, but what earthly good would result from it? That is the point.

He Had Nerve.

It takes nerve for a man with a bullet in his brain to keep a record of his sensations. The other day Mr. M. R. Stethelmer, of San Francisco, attempted to commit suicide. He fired a bullet into his head, and finding that he was not dead he proceeded to write down the facts of the case. For three hours he jotted down his thoughts and feelings. He mentioned the fact that his wound bled profusely, but that he was still conscious. At the conclusion of his memorandum he wrote: "Will try another shot after I have a smoke. Still conscious; must finish this business; now for another shot through the heart."

Fortunately the loss of blood exhausted him, and he was found in a fainting condition, and prevented from carrying out his purpose. Although the bullet entered his brain he is now in a fair way to recover.

What makes the case of unusual interest is the superb control of his mental and physical powers displayed by Stethelmer after receiving such a tremendous shock to his entire system. There is not a similar instance on record, and the medical men of San Francisco are now waiting with some curiosity to see whether their patient will be a perfectly sane man when he recovers. It is the theory of some that his splendid exhibition of nerve is a sign of madness.

Turning Warriors Into Workers.

Prince Nicholas, of Montenegro, is tired of the continuous warfare in which his subjects have been so long engaged.

The prince recently left his country for a visit to France, and just before his departure he assembled his soldiers, and delivered the most remarkable speech on record. He told his generals and privates that they were all heroes, but they would not work. The energy which they devoted to warfare would make the country rich if devoted to the productive labors of peace. He had patiently waited many years to see if they would recognize the fact that it was the duty of men to work, but as they seemed to prefer fighting he would proceed to issue his final orders. He directed every private soldier to plant this year 200 vines, every commander of a brigade to plant twenty, every commander of a battalion to plant ten, officers of lower rank five, and non-commissioned officers one olive tree apiece.

The gallant heroes of the Montenegrin army were inexpressibly shocked and disgusted, but a command from their prince must be obeyed, and it is estimated that the soldiers next spring will plant 4,000,000 vines and 20,000 olive trees.

The ruler of Montenegro is a wise prince, and in another generation his countrymen will bless him for his peaceful and business-like policy. Even in countries where the government has no power to issue such an order there is a lesson to be learned from this chapter of contemporary history. The moral is the value of organization and systematic work. The Montenegrins this year will do their farm work with the regularity of regiments and brigades charging an enemy in the field. Instead of destroying life and property they will build up their country and make the wilderness blossom as the rose. There is not a land under the sun where leagues and clubs of farmers would not find it profitable by similar united action to push the agricultural interest to the front, and win for it a controlling position in the industries of their country. It would accomplish far more than can be expected from unorganized and competitive labor.

THE INDIAN SQUADS are much more ferocious fighters than Grizzly Hoar. The SIDE-TRACK just fits the force bill. GRANNY HOAR should have a transmitter attached to his vocal chords. There is no reason why he should go squeaking about the senate like a wagon wheel that needs greasing.

JOHN SHERMAN has lost the presidency two or three times by posing as the man who knows all about finance.

MR. HARRISON is probably glad that Granny Hoar is not among the squaws that were killed.

THE GLOBE-DEMOCRAT complains that Congress has been engaged for five weeks in doing nothing. This is a great record, and it is entirely satisfactory to the people. The country is safe when a republican congress does nothing.

THE STATEMENT that Ingalls is Mr. Cleveland's cousin is a malicious invention of the enemy.

THERE IS said to be a crisis in the North American cabinet over the Indian question. Does this mean the secretary of war has threatened to thump the secretary of the interior on his exterior?

THE PENNSYLVANIA republicans have endorsed Don Cameron's opposition to the force bill by re-electing him to the senate.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

BISHOP NEWMAN is about to visit the west and south. In New Orleans he will deliver an address on "The Future of the Negro Race."

THE WIFE of Senator Ingalls has been interviewed upon her husband's political prospects. She says that the senator is a philosopher, and a brilliant, brainy man who has achieved his greatest successes under difficulties. It is her opinion that he will be re-elected, and she intimates that if he is defeated the country will inevitably go to the dogs. Mrs. Ingalls is a good talker, and if she is in the campaign she will win votes for her husband.

THE NEW YORK WORLD has the following breezy paragraph: "Here we are, back in the manner of a small coasting vessel, name unknown, is charged with abducting a young Philadelphia girl in a style that would have done credit to Buccarney or any other 'Scourge of the Antilles.' The captain was in Philadelphia on other day with his vessel. He invited two girls on board to inspect his cabin. One of the girls managed to get on shore. The other, Miss Smith, was imprisoned in the cabin, and the bold captain sailed away with his prize. Since that day the captain and his wild craft, the Holofernes, has not been heard of. Officers have been searching along the shores of Long Island, but as a trace can be found. Not since the day of the mad descent of the Romans upon the Sabines has this deed of Captain Riley been duplicated, when we come to consider its boldness and enormity. It is useless, we take it, to search along Long Island's inhospitable shores for Pirate Riley. He has undoubtedly sailed away to the gentle waters of the Bahamas and there, under the name of Captain Riley, he is now engaged in a most profitable business. But when this cruel and rapacious sea-dog falls into the clutches of the law—as fall he must, unless incensed Neptune encompasses him—what punishment can be made to fit his black crimes?"

THE SOUVENIR is the name of a very handsome and readable literary periodical which has just made its appearance in Birmingham, Ala.

A MASSACHUSETTS court has set aside a man's will because it was written and signed in due form. It seems that the testator was a notoriously profane man. He always swore, when he talked, swore in his letters, and even in his will. The surprise of everybody he departed from his usual style in his will, and wrote it in orthodox form, devoting his property to pious uses. The heirs of the law made the point that the old man must be in his right mind when he wrote his will, and the court saw it in that light. It is dangerous for a man to suddenly depart from his every-day habits when he does people will call him crazy.

GAUSE & BINSALL, of Richmond, Ind., have purchased the retail catalogue nursery trade of Hill Co., and with new capital and improved brick buildings have moved to the new premises in Indianapolis. The list of roses, especially, will attract attention, and the other plants advertised are of superior quality at reasonable prices. Send to Gause & Binsall for a copy of "Flora's Beauties," and it will be mailed to you free of charge.

BOULANGER has telegraphed to Paris that he is still the head of his party. He is a dead-head, then.

NEW YORK, after worrying over the rapid transit problem for years, is about to settle the matter. Mayor Grant has appointed a commission composed of representative business men like John H. Inman, and from the efforts of the commission a good system must come. This suggests the need of energetic action in Atlanta. Companies holding large franchises and monopolizing many streets are giving shamefully inadequate service. Is it not time something was done to improve matters?

THE GOVERNOR of Texas cannot make both ends meet on a salary of $4,000 a year. During the last term of office he sold a farm to help pay his living expenses. The southern states all pay their governors very small salaries.

Certainly It Does.

From THE CLARKVILLE, Ga., Advertiser. THE CONSTITUTION certainly leads the van in southern journalism—being a great and truly valuable newspaper. If the people of this section would all subscribe for THE Advertiser, to keep up with local matters, and then take THE WEEKLY CONSTITUTION, they would keep thoroughly posted on both local and general matters of interest—moral, social, political and material.

GOSSIP OF A DAY.

Here's a scene from life as a newspaper reporter sees it.

One bitter cold morning between 1 o'clock and 2 o'clock not long ago a negro man came running in, in which she speaks even more plainly than she has heretofore. So far as the Lippincotts are concerned, its fate is determined, but I fear that the pruning knife will have to be used before it is published.

Off to the side of the unopened street, down in a deep gulch worked out by the heavy rains. Two white women, and a child about two or three years old. The three were lying on the hard frozen ground, with nothing but a few ragged garments protecting them from the biting cold.

Both the women were sound asleep. But the child, huddled close up to the side of one of the women, and clasping in its little hand the tongue of a toy wagon, was crying as if its heart would break.

The child with its toy wagon—only a few shreds of clothing—in such a place on such a bleak night! There was something very pathetic in the scene, aside from the two women, the mother and grandmother, who had fallen asleep in a drunken stupor.

There isn't a better hearted man in Georgia than Bill Tanner.

Bill Tanner came into the station house just as some constable was locking the door. In another instant, without any inquiry, the woman's fine was in the station house keeper's hands, and in a few minutes more a messenger was on the way to release her from the station house. The next day I was big hearted Bill Tanner who did it.

And the officers told me he has done the like hundreds of times before.

Mr. John Joyner has a very bright little girl. The other day she was riding out in the country with him, when they came upon a man engaged in cutting a large timber square.

"Why does that ax remind you of the rainbow, pay?" asked the girl.

"Don't know, of course."

"The how."

Here's one that is going the rounds at the high school just now:

"What English writer does tough beef remind you of?"

"Cowper?"

"Bulwer?"

"No."

"Chaucer."

The city of Atlanta, or rather the board of police commissioners, has determined to do away with the "black cat" patrol wagon.

And, after trying first the "black cat" and then the open wagons, the city of Cincinnati has done away with the open wagons.

The people of Cincinnati kicked against the open wagons, and they were right. It was an unwarranted contempt, but also exposed the public to many shocking and indecent sights.

A prisoner is supposed to be innocent until he is found guilty, and a prisoner is innocent until he is found guilty. They are not only prisoners, but they are also victims of a cruel and unjust system.

Two new open wagons have been built for the department. This makes three in all.

Again, it requires two men to run one open wagon, when it took but one to attend to the closed "Maria." Just double the expense, and where's the advantage?

Cuba spoken of as a place where pretty women were as numerous as bill collectors.

"That's where you're off. Why, I can stand on Wallhall street for an hour any afternoon and see more fine-looking women than there are in the whole island."

Show me a railroad man for good judgment every time.

ECHOES FROM THE PEOPLE.

A Card from Colonel Anderson. Major, Ga., January 9.—Editor Constitution: Reporters of THE CONSTITUTION, and of other newspapers, have several times recently referred to me as "the acting attorney general."

I have not thought it a matter of sufficient importance, heretofore, to correct these statements, but I now find it necessary, because I am getting letters from people in different parts of the state requesting me to attend to business connected with the attorney general's office.

Please allow me to state, for the information of the public, that I am not acting as attorney general, that I am only representing the state in matters of pressing importance; and that, having resumed the general practice of the law, at my office in Macon, I could not conveniently act as attorney general, even if the governor deemed it desirable that I should. Information from the Attorney General Lester affords ground for hope that he can soon resume his official duties. I am sure he will, in his affliction, receive the generous indulgence and sympathy of the people.

Please publish this communication, and oblige, very respectfully yours, CLIFFORD ANDERSON.

A Battle Flag. ATLANTA, Ga., January 9.—Editor Constitution: I noticed in this evening's Journal that I had presented, or would present, the battle flag of the Fourth Georgia regiment to our distinguished governor. In reply I beg to say that the above statement is incorrect. The said flag is the property of the Fourth Georgia regiment, and the flag cannot, if I so desired, give it to anybody.

The above glorious old colors, will be as safe as my hands as they were on many fields of battle. "Who doubts me?" JAMES F. MURPHY, Ex-Ensign Fourth Georgia Regiment.

Erotic Literature. From THE BOSTON Herald. I asked Mr. Stoddard whether the flood of erotic literature emanating from young women gave any sign of abating, and he answered: "On the contrary, it is rapidly increasing in volume and virulence. Since I have been in New York this time I received a novel from a well known woman writer which goes further into the realm of realism than almost anything I have ever seen. Yet she is a good, honest, pure woman, who commands the respect of all who know her, and she really does not appear to realize that her lines are unfit for publication."

"I do not know how to account for it except by saying that it is a symptom of the times, and that women get into an emotional condition in which they imagine that there is nothing that cannot be portrayed in plain language. I am going this evening to see this young woman and advise her as a friend to throw her work in the fire and save her reputation, and yet I do not for one moment imagine that my suggestion will be acted upon. I do not know whether I should whisper it or not, but Annie Rivers (Chandler has written another novel, in which she speaks even more plainly than she has heretofore. So far as the Lippincotts are concerned, its fate is determined, but I fear that the pruning knife will have to be used before it is published."

So English. From THE NEW YORK Letter. A "curled darling" just turned twenty, who numbers among his other possessions a wealthy father, a yellow moustache and a lot of London-made clothing, said to a New York newspaper man the other evening: "My dear fellow, I wish you would put the things I say to you in the paper. It might help the other fellows, and as you won't print my name, it won't hurt me. Just say for me that it's very bad form to wear putent trousers in the morning, and positively imprudent to appear in a sack coat and a high silk tie. Another thing, always wear a flower in your buttonhole, but under no circumstances let it be a red one. Don't talk to the waiter who serves your dinner. Don't drink cocktails after 2 p. m., and above all things, don't carry a newspaper through the streets. They don't do it in London, but they do it here. New York society lacks reserve—I guess that is the word. At any rate they lack something here." Then the narrow, chested, pale-faced follower of McAllister rolled and lighted a cigarette and with a solemn little bow went on his way rejoicing.

The Eloquent Chief Tecumseh. From an Interview in THE Indianapolis News. "General William Henry Harrison thought the greatest man in the country was the most eloquent man in the country. He never tired of repeating Tecumseh's words at the famous conference which was held at Vincennes, in 1811. I learned them by heart. I remember General Harrison said that when Tecumseh was asked to sit upon a chair in the dirt-floored hut, where the conference was held, the chief straightened up to his full height and proudly said: 'The sun is my father; the earth is my mother, and I will recline on her bosom.'"

"So saying he waved away the proffered chair and sat upon the ground. I knew then that there was trouble ahead, and that we would be fortunate to escape from it," General Harrison was wont to conclude.

Very Suspicious. From THE BOSTON Courier. Sagacious Employer—I fear, Mr. Toogood, that I shall have to dispense with your services.

New Clerk—Why, sir, I know I have only been here a week, but I have not during this time been thoroughly faithful to your interests?

Employer—Oh, you have been faithful enough and capable enough, but—

New Clerk—But what sir?

Employer—Well, I saw you take a postage stamp out of the drawer yesterday.

New Clerk—Yes, sir, but I put 2 cents in its place.

Employer—That's just what I can't understand. I guess you'd better go.

Mr. Parker Was Pleased. From THE GAINESVILLE, Ga., Eagle. Mrs. J. D. Parker, who isjourning temporarily at the Hudson house, presented her husband, handsome New Year's gift, last Thursday morning, in the shape of a bouncing baby boy. These popular young people are receiving congratulations on every hand. Mr. Parker is a member of the operating staff of the Western Union office in Atlanta, and Mrs. Parker was formerly Miss Nettie Wright, of this city.

PEOPLE HERE AND THERE. BATH.—Mrs. Amelia Barr, the story writer, is said to make more money than does the chief justice of the United States.

CHOL.—Dr. James Croil, the first to explain the movement of the Gulf stream, has died at the age of sixty-eight, a distinguished fellow of the Royal Society.

BUTLER.—General Butler owns the Craig ranch, below Pueblo, consisting of 100,000 acres. He is also the owner of three-fourths of a 600,000-acre ranch in New Mexico.

DIAG.—President Diaz began his political career while an officer in the army by leading an insurrection. He kept on in that line until he reached the presidency, but is now the most conservative politician in Mexico.

NICHOLS.—Governor Francis T. Nichols, of Louisiana, is distinguished by a remarkable extent. He has lost a leg and an arm and an eye. He lost his leg at Chalmetteville, and his arm was carried away by a cannon ball at Winchester.

HUGO.—Jeanne Hugo is to be married to Alphonse Baudet's son at Passy (Paris) January 15th. M. Jules Simon will make a speech on the occasion of the union of the granddaughter of France's noblest old poet to the son of the charming provincial novelist.

TUCKER.—The writer who has been deaf to children's hearts for years under the pseudonym of A. L. O. E. (A Lady of England), and whose real name is Miss Tucker, is a busy worker among the almshouses of northern India. She is said to be a charming old lady, and to be devoted to her mission work.

SWINBURNE.—The poet Swinburne has a liking for outdoor exercise in all weathers. Even when the roads are rivers of mud he goes out for a walk and a visit to his favorite cat shop. On such occasions he presents a rather novel appearance, wearing, as he does, a short gray coat, short trousers, and thin, elastic garters.

SALVATERRA.—Frau Sophie Salvaterra, an able German woman of letters, has issued an appeal to her countrywomen to reform those national modes of education which consider girls simply as future wives and housekeepers. Their present training, she says, leaves German women without individuality and with pitifully low ideals of life.

SOMEBODY remarked that he had always heard

GENERAL LONGSTREET

THE "OLD WAR HORSE OF THE CONFEDERACY" IS HERE.

He Is On His Way To San Antonio, Texas. His History of the War to Be Completed Soon—Lee's Right Bow.

General James Longstreet stood talking with several gentlemen at the corner of the Kimball yesterday, when several platoons of policemen marched by with measured tread.

"General, you have seen such men in columns before," remarked an old "vet," as the officer passed to take up their beats.

"Yes," replied the old warrior, whose legs now frosted with years, "I have seen 200,000 men moving at a double quick, with the zip, zip, zip—ping, plug for minnie balls under the air vol with the music of battle."

Just then Colonel J. O. Waddell stepped up and said: "General, do you remember when you took three regiments of General Beauregard's 'Rock Brigade,' and as skirmishers, fought them against thousands of yankees on our retreat from Petersburg?"

"Oh, yes," said General Longstreet, "I had a message post haste from General Lee, and at once moved my men across the river. Riding rapidly ahead, I found General Lee bed at 3 o'clock in the morning, when he had a consultation with him in his bus. Looking out I saw the yankees had broken Lee's line and were surging through. Once I distributed my staff and they roared and thither, which led the enemy to believe we had a large force confronting them. After awhile I collected together 300 men of Benning's brigade, and we fought Gibbon's entire corps from hilltop to hilltop and covered General Lee's retreat."

"I remember," continued General Longstreet, "while eating dinner at the Fifth Avenue Hotel Horace Greeley said to me, 'General Sheridan once remarked that the best way to make soldiers fight was to curse them; what do you think about it?'"

"Referring to this incident near General Lee's tent," told Mr. Greeley, "you are on top of a high hill near the enemy, looking at a posed position, and with my field glass surveyed Gibbon's corps of 5,000 men, and saw other detachments come up, making a formidable array that would appal the stoutest heart; and looking around saw Benning's 300 men in splendid alignment right behind me. Cursing such men would have done harm, but appeal to their manhood and self-respect and they would have followed you to the cannon's mouth."

As the general concluded, another old soldier said: "The best moral example of that kind I ever saw was at First Manassas, July 18, 1861, when General Longstreet rode up at Beauregard's side with McDowell was trying to turn Beauregard's right."

"General Longstreet was smoking a cigar very cool, and issued orders as calmly to the Washington artillery as if in a dress-parade, though cannon balls were plowing up the ground right and left. Longstreet's nerve and self-possession imparted confidence to his men, and we stuck there and drove the yankees back, though once or twice we wavered and were on the point of giving way, and would have done so but for General Longstreet's superb courage that braced us up. If, in a critical moment, a commander by a mere expression of his countenance, shows uneasiness or nervousness, it will spread to the soldier and cause a panic immediately; but if they see he is calm, it reassures them."

As the speaker ceased General Longstreet raised his hat, and moved off, whereas somebody said "God bless the old war horse," and the group dispersed.

THE WATER SURVEY TO NORCROSS TO BEGIN MONDAY.

City Engineer Clayton and Superintendent Richards to Look Over the Route. Balance Sheet—Assessors.

City Engineer Clayton and Superintendent Richards will begin the new survey for the new waterworks Monday next.

"You see," said Mayor Hemphill yesterday, "the impression is general that the Chattahoochee should supply the water for the new system."

"What will be the length of the line?" "It will be about twenty miles to the point at the river near Norcross, but that is measured by the river line. The route by which the water will be brought will be shorter."

"The water will flow into Atlanta, or to the point near Atlanta, where we want it." "But how about crossing Peachtree creek?" "That will be easy enough. The engineers say that the water can be brought under the creek through an inverted siphon without any trouble whatever."

"The water will be able," continued Mr. Hemphill, "within a few weeks to decide upon the work. For my part, I am for the best and the best supply. Mr. Herring's point is quite good, and so is the one at Norcross, I am told."

ON THE RAIL

A TRAFFIC MANAGER FOR THE WEST POINT TERMINAL.

Other Matters of General Interest to the Railroad World—What Is Going On Throughout the Country.

A prominent railroad man thus aired his views on the railroad economic question yesterday.

"The Richmond and West Point Terminal Company is an association of roads that have pooled, or tried to pool, issues for mutual advantage, advancement and economy."

"The traffic manager, really the executive officer, must be a man of long experience, sagacity and shrewd foresight; in truth, a man whose reputation as a railroad creator must be beyond all question."

"There are several men who I think would successfully manage the vast business of this, the greatest railroad system in the world. Among them are Henry Fink, Milton H. Smith, E. B. Stahlman, S. H. H. Clark and a few others. It would take a big effort to bag such a man, but I think it would be worth the effort."

"The Atlantic and Danville railroad, now in financial difficulty and in a receiver's hands, has no connection with the Richmond and Danville or with any road in the West Point Terminal system."

"The universal opinion of local railroad men, as voiced yesterday by the CONSTITUTION, is now borne out by the official announcement that hereafter the Cincinnati Southern railroad will control all freight traffic of the East Tennessee-Queen and Crescent consolidation north of the Ohio river, while the East Tennessee will look after that portion of the country south of its lines, which means either Chattanooga or Atlanta."

"Mr. M. K. Northam, the Florida Queen and Crescent freight agent, recently passed in accordance with this plan, is too valuable a man to lose, and arrangements are already being made to give him a remunerative berth in some other division of the system."

THE VESTIBULE LIMITED TRAIN. On the Richmond and Danville Railroad, Is an Assured Success.

The Washington and Annapolis train is making a splendid record. This train carried twenty-six passengers into Washington, on its last trip, and each Atlanta this morning nearly every berth taken. Crowds of admiring people still continue to go through the train every morning, and praise its merits.

NEARLY COMPLETED.

THE GOVERNMENT BUILDING HAND-SOMELY EQUIPPED.

It is getting the finishing touch, and the Furniture is coming from Washington—Through the Building.

The new postoffice building is being fitted up with elegant furniture.

A large consignment of desks and carpets was received yesterday morning; these to be used in fitting up the first floor of the building most acceptably, and the arrangements have been made by the secretary of the treasury for the entire building with equally elegant and comfortable furniture as soon as the building is completed.

Within a month, and perhaps by the first of February, the building will be finished from basement to garret and the elevator will be started, giving a business-like air throughout the four stories.

The departments of the circuit and district courts will be moved into the building by the last of this month, and will be placed in very comfortable and superior quarters.

FROM THE TREASURY.

A letter was received yesterday by the authorities in charge of these departments stating that the treasury department was awaiting the receipt of diagrams of the courtrooms and offices, so that the carpets for the same could be shaped and sent here. An order for new furniture for these departments was made out yesterday and sent to the treasury department.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

The secretary of the treasury has recommended to Congress the appropriation of $2,000 for supplying the building with electric lights, and it is considered certain that no hesitancy or delay in this line will be experienced.

The second and third stories of the structure are already completed, and the fourth will be finished by the builders, it is estimated, within ten days.

Both the old and the new portions of the building will be painted throughout and new heating apparatus will be placed in it.

The building, when completed, be one of the finest in the south.

AT THE THEATRE.

"The Ivy Leaf" was the bill at DeGives' last night.

The play is well known here, and is pleasantly remembered. It is one of those bright little Irish comedy dramas—drawn on conventional lines, to be sure, but none the worse for that fact— which amuse and entertain. The company presenting the play is made up of thoroughly capable people, and the performance is in every way a creditable one.

Mr. Smith O'Brien is at the head of the company. He has been in the former visits of the company. There is some sweet singing by the quartette and by individual members of the company, some good dancing, and no small amount of genuine Irish humor.

"The Ivy Leaf" will be repeated this afternoon and tonight.

Annie Pixley as "Miss."

Annie Pixley, the popular comedienne, is announced to appear at the opera house next Monday and Tuesday evenings and on Tuesday afternoon, when she will present two of her most charming plays—"Miss" and "Deacon's Daughter." It has been several years since Miss Pixley has presented "Miss" in this city. It is in this role she first gained renown, and it doubt her coming appearance will be greeted with large and fashionable audiences. Miss Pixley is said to have surrounded herself with an admirable company, among whom are Charles H. Bradshaw, John T. Burke, Joseph Brennan, Ben F. Grinnell, Charles T. Sprague, George H. Brandt, Ravelli, Carrie Reynolds, Anna Douglas, and others. Both plays will be handsomely mounted, and Miss Pixley will introduce several new and sparkling songs and medleys.

The Pearl of Pekin.

Next week Rice's Comic Opera Company appears at the opera house "The Pearl of Pekin." The bright sayings, the catchy music, and the extraordinary beautiful stage dressing, place "The Pearl of Pekin" far ahead of any production of its type yet seen on the local stage. It is a delight to the eye, a banquet to the ear, and the novelty and force of its humor fill the auditorium with laughter from the rise to the fall of the curtain.

An Old Lady's Death.

News of the death of Mrs. Caroline G. Allen, of East Point, reached the city yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Allen was in the eighty-fifth year of her age, and was well known and greatly beloved in the community.

The remains were taken in charge by Mr. C.H. Swift, and will be sent to Augusta for interment Saturday.

BROCHITIS

Is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes—the air-passages leading into the lungs. Few other complaints are so prevalent, or call for more prompt and energetic action. As neglect or delay may result seriously, effective remedies should always be at hand. Apply at once a mustard poultice to the upper part of the chest, and, for internal treatment, take frequent doses of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skillful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine, saying he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, with a week's rest, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This indisputable evidence of the great merit of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me unbounded confidence in the preparation, and I recommend it to my customers, knowing it cannot disappoint them."

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured me of a bad cough and my partner of bronchitis. I know of numerous cases in which this preparation has proved very beneficial in families of so that the medicine is known among them as "the consolator of the afflicted."—Jaimé Rufus Vidal, San Cristobal, San Domingo.

"A short time ago, I was taken with a severe attack of bronchitis. The remedy ordinarily used in such cases failed to give me relief. Almost in despair of ever finding anything to cure me, I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was helped from the first dose. I had not finished one bottle before the disease left me, and my throat and lungs were as sound as ever."—Geo. B. Hunter, Altoona, Pa.

DECISIVE REDUCTIONS

We can serve a double purpose all through the store, and especially in the Tailoring Department. We want to move the stock on hand and keep work-people busy. Money and work are neither too plentiful just now. So we make a clear, extravagant discount from our regular established prices for Clothing, Custom or Ready-Made.

The style of manufacture, the perfect fit, the thing about it is stamped superior. We'd rather have the money if we don't get their worth.
